Show Concern

It's easy to be busy with what we need to do, but taking time to notice the people around us, and to see what is happening around us, is a good habit to have and cultivate. A very appreciated one too! People need other's help from time to time. You will need help at times too, and you'll be so glad that someone stopped to look around and notice your needs and help you out.

Why do people admire the firemen, the paramedics, and rescue workers so much? Because they spend their work time doing nothing else but being on call to help others. When there is someone in need of help, they put that as their top priority. They don't worry about how they look, or if they even get to finish their meal. When someone is in need of help, it's the most important thing to them.

You can have the same love, care, and focus too. When someone needs help, react as if it's your most important job right then—if it's something you can do, and it's the right and safe thing to do.

Even if it's a small and humble thing like helping your little brother or sister turn on the light, or wiping up a spill of water that you notice on the floor so that no one slips and falls.

Be on call, and show that you care. You'll be loved and appreciated for showing concern and doing something to help whenever you can.

Be Understanding

Have you ever seen a new piece of equipment and wondered how it worked? Perhaps your mum got a new blender and she read the instructions to help her get an understanding of how it worked.

Once she knew what to do and how to do it, and knew what each part was for, then she was ready to operate and use the machine. She could then
